

A close-up photograph of a garden bed. A metal rake with many tines is positioned at the top of the frame, its tines pointing downwards into a layer of brown wood mulch. In the lower right area of the mulch, a small, bright green plant with two leaves is growing. The scene is brightly lit, casting shadows from the rake's tines onto the mulch.

Sometimes all we have to do to grow is clear away the debris

Pat Deegan

<https://www.patdeegan.com/>